5 class periods

This program is designed for five class periods, during the span of one week. Every day, an educator works with students and explores the range of possibilities in printmaking. Students learn examples of well-known printmakers of the past, including etchings of J. Andre Smith, the A&H's founder. They will learn the progression of printmaking and will build upon the basics of relief printing by experiencing monoprinting and reduction printing. At the end of the residency, students will have collaborated to create works of art that fit together to display in class or take home. We provide special equipment, materials and tools.
